

ALLISON

INSIDE THE MIND OF...

Female, Caucasian

Mid 30s

Allison is a beautiful, vibrant single mom raising her mixed-race son. Her striking appearance contrasts sharply with her rough, unrefined dialect—a reminder of the hard life she's endured. Bold and outspoken, she says exactly what she thinks and never hesitates to make the first move. Always chasing excitement and connection, she pulls others into her spontaneous adventures with ease. But beneath the confident exterior lies a quiet ache—an unhealed wound she tries to numb with the world's distractions. Deep down, Allison is searching for a fulfillment only God can truly provide.

Audition Monologue

Look, marriage? That's a trap, girl. Men don't change—they just get better or worse at hiding who they really are. You think you need a man to be whole? Nah. I've seen too many hearts get crushed tryin' to make something work that ain't there.

—She glances up, spots a man nearby, pauses, smirks—

But hey, don't get me wrong. Sometimes, a man walks in and makes you wanna rethink everything. Just don't let that fool you—keep your guard up, and trust only what you see, not what you hope for.
